DESCRIPTION

Keillor House is a beautiful period country house of principally stone construction under a slated roof with sash and case windows and a pretty entrance porch. It enjoys a southerly aspect overlooking the pretty parkland field to the front flanked with mature deciduous trees and cascading ponds, providing a most attractive and mature backdrop to the house. Following its purchase, the current owners undertook a programme of refurbishment resulting in a well presented and practical family house boasting a wealth of period features throughout.

On entering Keillor House the charm is immediately evident in the hall with a sweeping wooden staircase, part wood panelling and cornicing. Panelled doors lead to both the drawing room and dining room; these two principal reception rooms enjoy high ceilings, bay windows, wooden floors, ornate cornicing and period fireplaces. A door leads from the drawing room into the garden room, a delightful and quiet room with tall south facing windows from where to enjoy the peaceful surroundings.

To the east side of the house is the library, a most cosy and intimate room with fitted bookcases, fireplace and south facing windows. The breakfasting kitchen is at the rear of the house and has an excellent range of fitted floor and wall cupboards with a walk in larder with the butler's pantry adjacent. To the west side of the house is a superb, good sized family room which offers multiple potential uses such as a studio, playroom or home office. Beyond is the generous and practical laundry room.

Unusually, Keillor House has an indoor swimming pool, forming the east wing with generous windows overlooking the grounds. There are two showers and a WC, together with a small kitchen area, resulting in a superb space for the whole family to enjoy.

The bedrooms lie on the first floor. The principal bedroom is generously proportioned with a double aspect and lies adjacent to a family bathroom. There are further three double bedrooms, one with a dressing room, serviced by two further bathrooms with a single bedroom completing the first floor accommodation.
