DESCRIPTION

The property further benefits from 8 car parking spaces.

HISTORY

Bank House was built in circa 1760 by Robert Shortreed, the then Sheriff Substitute of Roxburghshire. Shortreed was a lifelong friend of Sir Walter Scott and they first met when they were called to the Scottish Bar in 1792. It is believed Shortreed accompanied Scott on his many visits into Liddesdale and Scott was a frequent visitor to Bank House. A plaque in the car park highlights the "Louping Stane", a large boulder used by Scott and Shortreed to mount their horses before embarking on their travels.

In 1832 the British Linen Company bought the property from Shortreed's estate. The British Linen Co. later became the British Linen Bank which in turn was taken over by the Bank of Scotland. The Banks branch next door to the property was built in circa 1840 when the columns were added to the front of the original building.

Latterly the Bank of Scotland used the building as their manager's house until it was converted to an office in the 1990's.
